

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A digital to analog converter (DAC) for a communications system with reduced intersymbol interference incorporates dynamic element matching (DEM) with a matching element array having 2^M bits for an input corresponding to $M+1$ levels thereby
5 employing only one half the range of the DEM and array to produce the DAC output.